Reporting Matters

Identifier of research articles and scientific data (DOI and URL)

Point 1 What is the Accepted Author Manuscript:

The version of an article which has been peer reviewed and accepted, but before publisher formatting.

Also known as: author accepted manuscript, accepted manuscript, accepted version, post print, peer-reviewed version, author final version.

Point 2 Kyushu University provides APC support:

The Library has concluded transformative agreements for e-journal subscriptions and Open Access publication of articles with Elsevier, Wiley and RSC (Royal Society of Chemistry), and provides support for Article Processing Charge (APC).

Details: <https://www.lib.kyushu-u.ac.jp/en/services/open/gold/apc>

Support for submitting papers to top 10% journals is provided by the Academic Research and Industrial Collaboration Management.

Details (internal only): <https://airimaq.kyushu-u.ac.jp/university-relations-only/publication-fee-support/>

What is the scientific data?

Research data that are required to be published from perspectives of ensuring transparency and reproducibility in the journal's writing guidelines, and publication rules, such as supplemental data. It does not include data that are not assumed to be published, and data that are required in the process of peer review.

Does posting on a preprint server comply with the immediate open access mandate?

In the case of KAKENHI, making the peer-reviewed, accepted author manuscript publicly available on a preprint server (e.g., arXiv, bioRxiv) is considered compliant with the immediate open access mandate. For other types of competitive research funding, system integration is expected in the future. Please wait for the official notification.

*Please check the publisher's copyright policy to determine whether the accepted author manuscript can be deposited.
